WASHINGTON LETTER.

Synopsis of What is Going on at the Capital.

Special Herald correspondence.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Within the last week there has been a general increase of interest manifested in the result of the coming elections by the country at large. This awakening to the importance of the event so soon to transpire has produced a corresponding effect here in the capital among that class of people to whom the success or defeat of the several candidates means more than it does to the average party man.

Following in the wake of the leaders, ever since active work was begun, we have been regaled with boasts by the Democrats that the November elections would witness a break in the columns of western states whose electoral votes have always been found on the side of the Republicans.

Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Kansas and other staunch Republican states were claimed to be no longer safely and certainly Republican, and our Democratic friends have even gone so far as to protest that the only question in regard to them was as to how large would be their majority therein. But they were not alone in this rainbow chasing, as Chris. Magee's trip will abundantly prove. The friends of the Administration were equally loud in claiming that at last a break in the solid South was in sight. That Alabama, North Carolina and Virginia were wavering and would soon be safe within the Republican fold.

Lately here in Washington all such flights of fancy have been dropped and it is generally admitted that the light of '92 will be the old light of '88 on the same lines, with forces about equally matched, and with the same result.

Whatever advantage Cleveland had in 1888 by reason of being in possession of the federal patronage now inures to President Harrison; the Administration has been a popular one, and by its true Americanism and determined patriotism manifested in all its dealings with foreign powers has gained many friends among those who have always maintained that the United States should take its proper rank among the great nations, and protect its rights and those of its citizens in every land.

Taking a general review of the situation at present, the Republicans have greatest reason to claim that the vote in November will be in their favor. The pivotal state of New York is regarded on all sides as the decisive figure in the contest. It is necessary to Democratic success—absolutely so; and while Gen. Harrison could be elected without New York's vote, no one doubts that "no New York goes, no goes the Union." Advice received here within the past few days indicate that the full vote of the interior of the state will be polled, and that of course means Republican success.

Up to this time the registration of voters shows that the Republicans have considerably the best of the fight above Harlem, and an analysis of the reports show that there has been an increase of 53 per cent. in Republican cities against a gain of 33 per cent. in the Democratic cities. This activity in the ranks of the Republican party, taken in conjunction with the indecision and uncertainty of their opponents as to the course which Hill and Tammany will take in the fight argues well for the success of the former.

In conversation with a prominent New York Democrat the other day, I ask him what in his opinion would be the effect of the election of Cleveland on the influence which the delegation from that state has hitherto exerted in the National Democratic Convention? He replied that there was the chief reason why Tammany and Hill would not, and further could not, allow the ex-President to be elected. "In the convention," he went on, "as is well known, New York did all in its power to prevent his nomination, declaring his inability to carry the state. Therefore, if in the face of those statements, Cleveland is elected, it means the utter overthrow of the prestige and influence with which the delegation from the Empire state has always entered the National convention."

The gentleman referred to was a prominent supporter of Senator Hill in the Chicago convention, and his sentiments are but a reflection of the general feeling which exist among the friends of the junior Senator from New York. The "very latest" advice from Indiana which have been received by the President and from sources to be relied on, indicate that the dissatisfaction, which it was claimed existed among Republicans of that state, has been greatly exaggerated. There is not as much enthusiasm manifested as there was in 1888 because the President is here at the post of duty, while there the candidate for the Presidency was right there among the people of Indiana, and the Hoosiers vied with each other in doing honor to their fellow citizen.

Since the last election, too, there has been an extensive immigration of protectionists from Pennsylvania and Ohio, notably the former and it is reliably stated that this influx has been so large that one district which formerly was Democratic by 700, is now Republican by a safe majority.

To sum it all up, Cleveland needs New York and Indiana to secure an election. If he loses either, he is defeated.

Harrison can be elected without New York, if he gets Indiana, and with New York his election is assured. F. H.
